

2 There are more than sides TO EVERY STORY

Facts, figures and feelings complement photographs combined in either a news feature story or separate packages to relate the life experiences of your readers.

This multi-faceted approach to storytelling fits the fast-paced and inclusive approach to yearbook coverage, verbal and visual content and graphic design.

Consider your readers' preferences and patterns as well as all verbal/visual options as you allow your content to drive your design.

Incorporate font and color palette choices as well as any predetermined verbal and visual cool tools to set just the right tone and mood for your individual package as well as the total spread.

Once you have completed your story starter planning sheet, sketch your module design here making sure it will blend with other spread packages.
